

Harry Egon Moesby received the diploma of Engineer at Aalborg University Campus Esbjerg in 1979 and three years later (1981) obtained the degree of Bachelor of Science of Engineering at Aalborg University Campus Esbjerg. His PhD theses in writing: “What is an effective approach to introducing POPBL in an institution?- A model for making the change to PBL/POPBL as an alternative approach to Higher Education Institutions“. (Based on international experience) He has a professional relationship with Aalborg University since 1990, in which he has been appointed several positions: Head of School, Basic Studies of Science and Engineering since 1995, Head of Study Board, School of Basic Studies of Science and Engineering since 1995 or Board member of Board of Master Educations. He was also in charge of the implementation of the PBL programme for the first year when Esbjerg Engineering College was changed into a Campus of Aalborg University in 1995. At present he is Head of Department, School of Basic Studies of Science and Engineering. He is further acting as international consultant for institutions assisting in their processes of change.